Stavely Minerals is a publicly listed Australian junior exploration company, experienced in exploring for copper in various locations around Australia, including in the region in western Victoria referred to in geological terms as the Stavely Arc.

Proposed Exploration Program in Block 3, Stavely Arc

Stavely Minerals proposes to explore for copper and gold in the southern part of the Stavely Arc. If an exploration licence is granted, Stavely Minerals intends to focus the first three years of its exploration program on selecting exploration targets and undertaking first pass testing of those targets. A number of techniques, including field investigations, a gravity survey, soil sampling and a ground survey are planned. Some targeted drilling is also planned.

Approach to engaging with communities

Through its projects in western Victoria, Stavely Minerals has developed relationships with a large number of local landholders and stakeholders in the Stavely Arc region. If granted an exploration licence, Stavely Minerals intends to identify and engage with local landholders in Block 3 at the start of its program. All impacted landholders and the Ararat City Council will be informed in writing about upcoming on ground exploration programs in a timely manner. The company's landholder liaison representative will contact landholders to ensure that there are no unanswered questions or issues about the planned exploration activities. Company representatives will be on site for on the ground exploration activities to liaise with landholders and to ensure they are kept informed as the program progresses.
